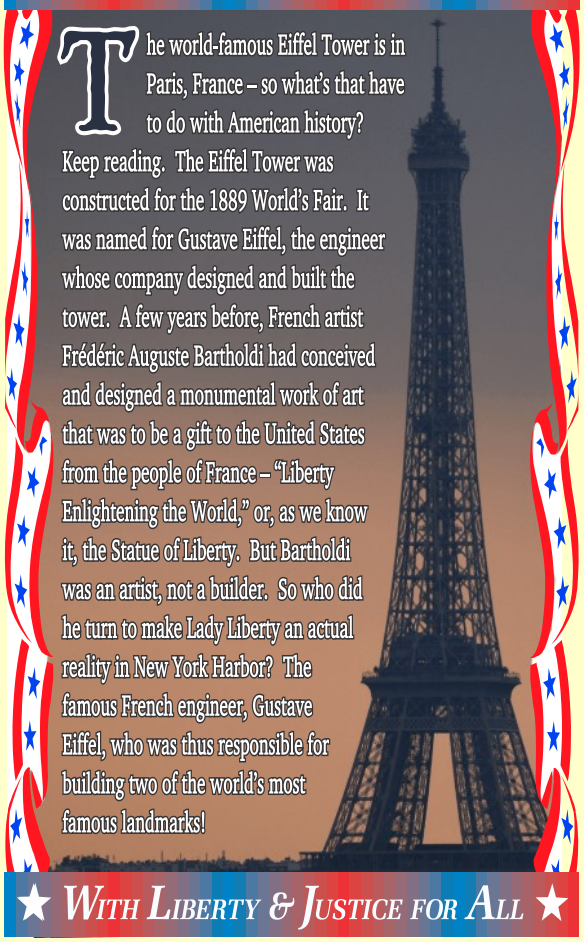
★ Our Nation's History ★



The world-famous Eiffel Tower is in Paris, France – so what's that have to do with American history? Keep reading. The Eiffel Tower was constructed for the 1889 World's Fair. It was named for Gustave Eiffel, the engineer whose company designed and built the tower. A few years before, French artist Frédéric Auguste Bartholdi had conceived and designed a monumental work of art that was to be a gift to the United States from the people of France – "Liberty Enlightening the World," or, as we know it, the Statue of Liberty. But Bartholdi was an artist, not a builder. So who did he turn to make Lady Liberty an actual reality in New York Harbor? The famous French engineer, Gustave Eiffel, who was thus responsible for building two of the world's most famous landmarks!
